GREETINGS FROM PRESIDENT KIM

Welcome to Columbia Weekend! We are delighted to have you with us and encourage you to take full advantage of the programs and activities on offer for the next two days. This is always an important event in the life of the college, and all of us are excited about showing off the vibrant creative culture of this very special community. You will experience it in its most tangible form at the Crawl on Friday, which will feature a range of student work and highlight the teaching and learning that goes on in our various academic programs.

We also want to hear from you and talk with you about your impressions, your questions, and your concerns. We have built opportunities for one-on-one meetings with student services staff into Friday afternoon’s schedule, and Saturday’s Academic Experience sessions will give you a chance to interact with our faculty. We hope that you will come away from the weekend with a clear sense of our commitment to facilitating the success of every Columbia student.

I look forward to greeting you at the president’s brunch on Saturday morning.

Kwang-Wu Kim

1104 S. Wabash Ave.
Department of Exhibitions, Performance and Student Spaces
Glass Curtain Gallery, 1st Floor
5 – 8 p.m.
Let’s Do It presents newly-commissioned projects by artists affiliated with the Center for Book and Paper Arts alongside artwork, photographs, and documents from the Center’s archives. In citing the past alongside the present, we can form a picture of what a book and paper practice looks like today.

From artists’ books to installation, both newly-commissioned projects and archival materials will reveal the spectrum of practices that thrived at the Center and that were presented through exhibitions, residencies, and publishing. It was through these activities that the Center made great strides in not only the ‘centering’ of book, paper, and print from the margins of contemporary art, but also in helping audiences better understand these practices and media aesthetically and historically.

Cinema and Television Arts
Cinema Slapdown Round 81: US
Film Row Cinema, 8th Floor
7 p.m.
It’s Columbia Weekend! Crawl on up to Film Row Cinema to join the college community at Cinema Slapdown—an unforgettable FREE-for-all experience that starts with a screening of Jordan Peele’s Us followed by a lively debate featuring students Analea Harris vs. Tangle Hawkins and refereed by faculty David Tarleton. You can weigh in too! Presented by Cinema and Television Arts and New Student Programs.

Revisiting FOCO: The Cutting Edge of Latinx Pop Culture (In Focus)

Library, 3rd Floor Reading Room

5 – 6 p.m.

Sixteen years ago, an interdisciplinary three-month festival showcasing the Latinx culture took place that was focused on language, literature, media, and visual and performing arts. Each event showcased the transcultural complexity of the Latinx experience, enthralling and educating festival attendees in celebration of Latinx cultural contributions to North American society. Join us for a Columbia College Chicago FOCO Festival retrospective with Humanities, History, and Social Sciences Associate Professor Dr. Carmelo Esterrich, who was integrally involved in the inaugural celebration. Moderated by Heidi Marshall, Head of College Archives and Special Collections. The FOCO exhibit will be held in the Library Reading Room from Oct. 1–Nov. 1, 2019. This exhibition showcases curated material from the archival collection.

33 E. Ida B. Wells Dr.
Department of Exhibitions, Performance and Student Spaces
Opening Reception: Field Book by Jordan Putt
C33 Gallery, 1st Floor
5 – 7 p.m.
Please join us for the opening reception of Field Book, a solo exhibition by Photography graduate student Jordan Putt. Field Book is a photographic survey of urban life in the American Southwest. Jordan Putt’s work is grounded in documentary photographic traditions and informed by his experience as a land surveyor in Arizona. This series interweaves boundary survey maps and photographic imagery to update the mythic depictions of the region and present a contemporary record of a desert landscape whose idiosyncrasies are contained in the muted tones and sparse terrain on the outskirts of Tucson, Arizona.

American Sign Language Department
In the Eyes of Deaf Artists: Susan Dupor
4th Floor
6 – 9 p.m.
Susan Dupor, a deaf artist, will give a presentation and art workshop. Susan Dupor lives in Lake Geneva, Wisconsin where she paints in her studio and teaches art at the Wisconsin School for the Deaf. Her work has been included in many group exhibitions such as the national touring exhibition, Elements of a Culture: Visions by Deaf Artists; 20 Deaf Artists: Common Motifs at Pro Arts Gallery in Oakland, CA; Work by Deaf Women at Ceres Gallery in New York; and A Deaf Perspective of Deaf Culture Through Art in Haverhill, Massachusetts. She also had a solo exhibit at the Washburn Art Gallery at Gallaudet University. Her work made appearances at the Switzer Gallery in Rochester, New York in 1993, 1995, 1996, and 2000, and at the Deaf Artists of America Gallery, in Rochester, New York.
